Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah, presented a compromise solution at a meeting Wednesday of the Provo River Flows Committee to resolve the conflict over the amount of water released from Deer Creek Reservoir that flows down the Provo River.

The committee was created two weeks ago in an effort to reach agreement on the river level between those who sought to conserve as much water as possible in Deer Creek Reservoir because of the drought and those wishing to maintain flows that preserve the river life, particularly the natural fishery.

The proposed compromise is outlined in a "Memorandum of Agree-

According to the statistics, BYU ranked 20th on a list of 28 universities across the nation.

Some universities dwarfed BYU's numbers, with dollar amounts in the hundreds of millions.

External funds represent money for research coming into the university from federal, state and private sources. Statistics may vary from one survey to another, depending on the sources used to compile the numbers, Lamb said.

In 1987 BYU received almost $17.5 million in external funds, a significant increase from previous years. But two state universities in Utah received considerably more. The statistics show Utah State University receiving more than $50 million and

Blacks, women take steps toward parity

WASHINGTON — Blacks and women eked out slim gains in this year's House races and held even in the Senate, but some supporters complained Wednesday that it would take centuries at that pace to achieve political parity. With blacks making up about 11 percent of the U.S. population and women accounting for more than half, just 5 percent of the 435 members of the new House will be black and about the same share will be women. The figures are even more lopsided in the 100-member Senate, which will remain all white for another two years and continue to include just two women. Blacks and women were at their high water marks of 22 and 23 members, respectively, in the expiring Congress. There will be one more black congressman in the new House and at least one, possibly two, more women. Feminist leader Eleanor Smeal said America is "locking out women and blacks" with a political system weighted toward those already in office. "We've got to do something about the rules," she said. "These are incumbent

Jane Danowitz, executive director of the bipartisan Women's Campaign Fund, said that despite incremental gains for female candidates, "it's still not

Air Force grounds bombers after crash

WASHINGTON — The Air Force on Wednesday grounded the nation's fleet of B-1B long-range bombers for a precautionary safety inspection following a crash of one of the new planes in Texas.

The Strategic Air Command, which is responsible for land-based nuclear bomber and missile forces, said the order to suspend flying was a "normal precaution" in the wake of a major accident.

The flight suspension order will be followed within the next day or two by specific instructions to B-1B mechanics on what aircraft systems they must inspect, said Lt. Col. George H. Peck, a spokesman at SAC headquarters in

Those instructions will probably reflect the suspicions of the official board of inquiry that is investigating Tuesday's crash of a B-1B near Dyess Air Force

Peck said he did not know which systems would be checked and would not speculate on the cause of the crash.

Safety concerns shut down the three reactors at Savannah River near Aiken, S.C.; a contamination incident and related problems closed a building at the Rocky Flats Plant near Denver; and a strike shut down the Feed Materials Production Center in Fernald, near Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Savannah River reactors are the only facilities in the United States now capable of producing plutonium and tritium. Plutonium supplies are plentiful, but the tritium shortage will cause problems, congressional and administration sources have said.

Former chief justice defends furloughs

WASHINGTON — Former Chief Justice Warren Burger defended prison furloughs but waited to speak out on the issue until just hours before the election of fellow Republican George Bush, who had campaigned for months against a furlough program in his opponent's home state.

Burger, in a statement released to The Associated Press on Tuesday, contended that the furlough issue had become "very much garbled" during the presidential campaign.

The campaign left a "general impression that furloughs are bad," the former chief justice, who now chairs the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, said in a telephone interview. He said he doesn't believe that either Bush or defeated Democrat Michael Dukakis actually opposes

State water plan draft adopted by Board

OGDEN — The State Board of Water Resources, after two years of painstaking revisions, has adopted a draft of a statewide water plan and is preparing to submit it for public review.

The tentative plan will be presented to interested groups sometime in January, when the State Division of Water Resources will accept comments and recommendations. A final set of guidelines should be approved by summer, said spokesman Ron Ollis. "The water plan is a set of general recommendations on water issues, including drinking and secondary water supplies, recreation, wildlife and industrial use, and drought and flood measures - a whole gamut of interests,"

"It's everything you ever wanted to know about water but were afraid to ask," said Gene Bigler, river basin planner with the Division of Water Resources, who has worked on the plan with the committee.

Ollis said he could not say what the recommendations are until the draft is printed because there are more corrections to be made. But he said they give direction on everything from the building of reservoirs to flood control.

'Bush'ed by the election?

Congratulate yourself.

You've survived all the name-calling, dirt-throwing, roll-in-the-mud-and-make-rude-remarks-about-each-other's-ancestors campaign rhetoric that this year's elections can throw your way.

You've successfully ducked each new piece of electoral verbiage the candidates have thrown at the viewers, filtered it out, and done your duty by electing a new set of leaders for this republic.

In the end, the fact that the United States can survive all this mess once again illustrates the power of the American electorate.

NIVERSE PINION

Let's hope that elected officials to high public office, survived all the mess as well.

The kind of negative campaigning we have witnessed this year could easily undermine the faith of the American people in their president. With all the problems the new president must tackle, now is not the time for the electorate to lose faith in the abilities of the person they have elected to such a high office.

Now is the time for that president-elect — George Herbert Walker Bush — to put all that garbage behind him, take the mantle of leadership in his hand, and prove his worthiness of the faith the American public has rested in his care. What this country needs is a leader, and President-elect Bush needs to be that leader. Vice President Bush — show the country you've got what it takes. The American Public needs to hear about your beliefs, dreams and desires. We don't want a pre-packaged, glossed-up, TV-sitcom version of life. We want and need someone who leads the nation to greater heights. We need an example, not a manager.

That advice could be extended to every political office holder, from school board, to county recorder, to senator, to president.

The electorate has placed faith in its elected leaders once again. As Bush noted Tuesday night, "The people have spoken." Let's make sure our elected leaders actually support and lead their people.

The time for campaigning and packaging is over. The time for leading has

Reserving resources

It is vital, as Dena Christiansen suggests, that we avail ourselves of the excellent addressments of our prophets on the subject of the origin of the human spirit and body. To facilitate a well-in-formed consideration of those topics, I have placed in the library a number of documents that relate to the subject, beginning with the address of Elder Boyd K. Packer. In the short time he had available, he was able to share with us only three of the relevant First Presidency statements: material from 1909, 1925 and 1957. Without that restriction of time, students will also wish to consult additional statements from Presidents and the First Presidency of the LDS Church. Accordingly, in the looseleaf binders in the Reserve Library (just ask at the desk for MISC 850), I have placed the following relevant documents:

- the entire 1909 document cited by Elder Packer, - the follow-up message related to that, in the April 1910 instructions to the Priesthood Quorums, suggesting various options for the origin of man's

- the April 1911 statement from Pres. Joseph F. Smith, wherein he reveals both personal sentiment and Church position,

- the 1925 First Presidency statement referred to by Elder Packer,

- the 1931 memo of the First Presidency to the other General Authorities, relating to substantive discussions ongoing at that time among the brethren and which were critical to the issue: whether death existed prior to the fall of Adam, and whether "pre-Adamic beings" had existed on earth, - entries from the journals of Apostle James E. Talmage and Pres. Heber J. Grant which relate to

- the 1954 speech by Pres. J. Reuben Clark of the First Presidency, triggered by a similar situation, and titled "When are Church Leader's Words Entitled to Claim of Scripture," from the Church News, - three letters from 1957 and 1959 from Pres. David O. McKay's office which relate to this matter; one of which is the one referred to by Elder matter while President,

- a summary of Pres. Benson's statements relat-

— the "I Have a Question" response to this topic from the Sept. 1987 Ensign, which was solicited and cleared for publication by the Ensign editorial board and others.

When we have thoroughly digested the excellent counsel given by Elder Packer and in these relevant documents from our prophets and Church sources, we will be in far better position to consider you will have to live with their blood on your hands. the very interesting matters of human rights.

No conflict

Dear Editor:

I am a student in Biology 200 which qualifies me as a non-expert on the subject of evolution. I have learned that evolution is no longer considered a theory, by biologists, but a fact. I have also learned that the disagreement with respect to evolution is not whether or not evolution has taken place — that is clear, but the phylogenies — evolutionary histories of species, and the mechanisms by which evolution has taken place. So, evolution is a scientific existence of these POW's, but there have been fact. Speculations on phylogenous relationships and possible mechanisms are theories. We have a namese refugees and immigrants that have seen responsibility to educate ourselves and to accept or these men. Vietnam has, however, within the past reject what we learn; there is nothing wrong in few years agreed to help resolve this issue of prislearning. For me, I do not embrace organic evolu- oners. # Open minds

Dear Editor:

As students, we, like Dena Christiansen, have been taught to ask questions. But we ask questions because we want to know the answers, not because we want to hide behind our personal beliefs. We are not writing in support of Drs. Bradshaw and help. Your letter, your voice, your prayers could inquiry. Why not keep an open mind about such their cause. topics as evolution, organic or otherwise? Until we know all, is it not irresponsible of us as thinking, reasonable beings to become irate or accusing simply because a belief we hold dear is challenged? On the other hand, should we discard all truth when we find one of our dear beliefs may not be accurate?

It is very readily shown that species are continually evolving and adapting to their environments, but at the same time, nobody really knows where all the animals and flowers came from. We just know that they're here, and that God has given us the wherewithal to study them and derive our own theories. All part of spiritual and scientific inquiry.

To pit the words of General Authorities against scientific theories supported research is sophomoric and contentious at best. The idea that science and religion are mutually exclusive is the product of people trying to figure out everything in the universe without really knowing anything. Where "revealed truth" apparently conflicts with "scientific truth," maybe it is our own understanding that should be called into question.

We wish Dena, Dr. Barnes and Dr. Bradshaw continued success in their quests for knowledge and

Help POW's

Dear Editor:

I want to direct the student body's attention to a subject which is very important. It concerns the lives of our POW's; America's servicemen of which we still have no account. Although I know for a fact that all of the servicemen reported missing are and were not prisoners of war, there are still a substantial amount of men who served in the Vietnam War that need our help.

Many of the Vietnamese leaders are denying the several reports to the contrary from many Vietcounted for.

As an American citizen, I am trying to make my fellow Americans aware of this problem and to strongly urge them to please help in this important matter. # Saluting efforts

Dear Editor:

On Monday I read the title of a Daily Universe article "Why you should vote for: George Bush, Michael Dukakis." Hoping to gain a last minute comparison of the two presidential candidates, I was disappointed by the column written by Doug Gibson on the behalf of George Bush. I expected to read an article in favor of George Bush, what I read was a negative article against Michael Dukakis. In fact, the article mentions Dukakis 17 times and Bush only seven times. Gibson's rival in this article was Jason Chaffetz, co-chairman of the Dukakis campaign in Utah. Chaffetz has been marvelous in his campaign efforts at BYU and in Utah.

During the primaries in March, I spoke with Chaffetz about his political choice. I had never heard of Mike Dukakis and wondered how an unknown could be considered as a potential presidential candidate. Jason presented to me the issues that Dukakis supported, and I was interested to learn more. On Nov. 2 The Daily Universe published a point/counterpoint debate concerning gun control. Defending the position on gun control, Chaffetz combined fact with reality to effectively show that our country needs more gun control

Lex Hemphill of the Salt Lake Tribune wrote an article in the sports section on Monday about Jason's ability to juggle school, football and politics. I also salute Jason Chaffetz for his efforts on behalf of the Michael Dukakis campaign for president. Although I voted for George Bush, I am proud of the manner in which Chaffetz stood up for what he

Fan club

Dear Editor:

We would like to make a request. Since we don't know who the DJ is, we thought we'd print it, hoping it will reach the appropriate authority. How about "Put Your Shoulder to the Wheel" or "Whistle While Your Work"? You see, "Come, Come Ye Saints" is one of our favorite hymns, but not every hour! The bell tower is a wonderful memorial and landmark, but its lack of tonality and tempo is beginning to spoil a wonderful piece.

Our suggestion is not to replace "Come, Come" with another permanent tune for us to grow tired of, but to program the tower for variety. "Come, Come" on Sundays, "Put Your Shoulder" Mondays, "Praise to the Man" Tuesdays, and so on. Come December, it would also be nice to hear "God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen," or some such — be-

Dear Editor:

Thank you for not being redundant. Recently an objection was voiced concerning the void left in The Daily Universe by the decision to stop running the AP and UPI "Top Twenty" polls. Don't change the presses yet. During the famous library tour that we are all required to take all are introduced to a magnificent source of current information — the Reserve Library. Many prominent newspapers already report the national sports scene fully by printing both famous polls regularly along with workers in the Midwest an excuse not various other statistics. Your local poll is both to support Bush and defeated the welcome and appropriate.

Elder Packer's remark allow for diversity

Brian A. Maurer is an assistant

Dena Christiansen's letter questioning why an evolutionary explanation of the origin of the physical bodies of mankind is taught on campus I think reflects the attitudes of many students who listened to Elder Packer's fireside address. I would like to express my own personal convictions regarding the subject.

It is necessary to point out the following. First, and foremost, Elder Packer's remarks were motivated out of a deep-seated love and concern for the students of this university. Second, and also very important, Elder Packer's remarks were clearly identified as being his own personal conviction rather than a statement of Church policy. Finally, it is important to note that in some instances, Elder Packer's assertions of his convictions were based on personal opinion regarding the implications of scriptures and statements by the First Presidency. Despite the strict tone of many of his remarks, current official Church pronouncements on the subject allow ample room for a diversity of personal convictions on the subject. It is important to realize that Elder Packer's main thesis that man is not only an animal is entirely consistent with an evolutionary origin of the physical bodies of the human race. Recall that the scriptures tell us that the natural man, with the tendency to justify actions based solely on the criteria of physical gratification, is an enemy to God. SALT LAKE CITY - Karl Malone and the Utah Jazz smashed the Sacramento Kings 105-81 Wednesday night at the Salt Palace, giving the team a 1-1 mark for the season.

The Jazz dominated the Kings in the first half but by the third quarter the Kings had cut the lead to seven points. Malone came on strong in the final quarter, tossing in 11 of his 35 points to lead the Jazz to the 24-point Malone credited the winning per-formance to the Jazz offense. "I think my teammates have gotten better, so my game has come along with them." Jazz Head Coach Frank Layden said he wanted to use the game as an opportunity to let the younger players get some playing time. "At this point in the season, let them have confidence. Let an (Éric) Leckner play with a John Stockton, let an Ortiz play with a Mark Eaton and a Malone.

Getting his first start of the season was rookie Jose Ortiz, who contributed five points. "It felt good to start tonight. The coaches are giving me the confidence to do my job and try to work with the guys. I'm getting to know the league a little better," he their set in the main ballroom of the Little America Hotel. Although the food lacked variety (potato chips, The stages were carefully set for pretzels and peanuts), the table was nicely decorated.

The Democrats had a wider selection of food at the Red Lion Hotel with meatballs, spicy chicken, vegetables, cheese and crackers.

The third and smallest set was locameras and radio stations. Wires for cated in the Marriott Hotel, for supporters of Independent Merrill Cook. Here they served crackers, fruit and parties; or rather, the press coverage cheese. However, the food did not do much to improve the atmosphere in the Marriott as supporters watched election returns on television. At the Little America, the people were tired, but, for the most part, seemed to have a good time.

Since both Republican and Democratic office-seekers for the most part gathered together, it was obvious that some candidates spent the night more cheerfully than others.

Cook brings home greatest number of third-party votes

By GILBERT E. FISHER Universe Staff Writer

Independent gubernatorial candidate Merrill Cook grabbed more than 80 percent of the votes Utahns cast for third-party candidates in Tuesday's election.

Election service officials in Salt Lake City said 15 third-party candidates were on the ballot in Utah for the presidency and the U.S. Senate and House, and state gubernatorial races. Cook received 136,117 of the 164,693 total votes cast for thirdparty candidates in those races

Also on the gubernatorial slate was Libertarian candidate Kitty Burton with 1,640 votes, or 0.25 percent, and with 1,640 votes, or 0.25 percent, and Arly Pederson of the American Party with 1,006 votes, or 0.15 percent.

In the presidential race, seven third-party candidates were listed on the ballot along with the two major party candidates. Libertarian Party presidential candidate, Ron Paul, topped the list of third-party candidates for president with 7,389 votes, or 1.14 percent of the total vote. Delmar Dennis, of the American Party, was second with 2,138 votes, or 0.33 percent. He was followed by Lenore Fulani of the New Alliance Party with 456 votes, or 0.07 percent.
